

BY TELEGRAPH.

THE STATE SUPREME COURT.

THE PROCEEDINGS OF YESTERDAY—STATUS OF THE CHARLESTON ELECTION CASE.

COLLEGE, April 13.—In the Supreme Court to-day the case of C. T. Lowndes vs. the executors of Mitchell King was heard. Messrs. W. G. DeSaussure and McAdams for the motion, and the Hon. A. G. Magrath contra.

WASHINGTON.

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS TREATY REJECTED BY THE SENATE—NOMINATIONS AND CONFIRMATIONS—ASPIRANTS FOR THE NEW JUDGESHIP, &c.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—In the Senate to-day the Alabama claims treaty was rejected by a vote of fifty-four to one.

The following nominations were made: Ackerman, District Attorney of Georgia; Lippard, Marshal of Western Texas; Packard, Marshal of Louisiana; Wm Howard, Minister to China, displacing J. Ross Brown; E. S. Parker (an Indian), Commissioner of Indian Affairs; S. S. Fisher, of Ohio, Commissioner of Patents; Thomas H. Nelson, of Ohio, Minister to Mexico; Charles N. Riddle, of Texas, Minister to Costa Rica; and J. A. Skelton, of Louisiana, Consul to the City of Mexico.

EUROPE.

BANQUET TO CHARLES DICKENS.

LIVERPOOL, April 10.—A banquet to Charles Dickens was given this evening at St. George's Hall, in this city. About seven hundred gentlemen sat down to the table, and there were also many spectators. The hall was gracefully decorated with flags and banners. The proceedings were characterized throughout with good feeling and enthusiasm.

PARIS.

PARIS, April 10.—In the Senate to-day, the defense of the Republic was the subject of the day. The President was generally approved. Marshal Niel said it was the duty of the country in time of peace to secure its safety. The army might be placed on a peace footing, and if it were needed, would rapidly pass to a war footing.

MADRID.

MADRID, April 11.—In the Cortes yesterday Moraga made a speech, in which he urged that the body of the adoption of a statute, to be known as the new constitution, which shall materially modify the powers and functions of the ministry, as well as reduce that branch of the government to a purely executive character.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRE.

Trenton and Mercer Counties, New Jersey, have been carried by the Democratic party. Silas A. Hudson, of Iowa, who has been appointed by President Grant minister to Guatemala, is a colored man.

THE TWITCHELL TRAGEDY.

Result of the Inquest—Burial of the Victim—Mrs. Twitchell makes a Statement—She Asseverates her Innocence—The Circumstances Prior to the Murder Detailed—She Believes her own Husband Guilty of the Crime.

From the Philadelphia papers we gather the following interesting particulars in relation to Twitchell, who committed suicide in prison, and Eaton, who was hanged in that city on Thursday last. The coroner's jury in the case of Twitchell rendered a verdict of "death by poison," and the coroner's jury in the case of Eaton rendered a verdict of "death by hanging."

FUNERAL OF TWITCHELL.

The body of the suicide was buried on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. A family connection, No. 1030 South Fourth-street, having been removed from the prison cell on Thursday, but by an unaccountable mistake, the body was not removed until Saturday morning.

FOREIGN SUMMARY.

—The ladies of Hungary have asked Parliament to authorize the Queen of Hungary (the Empress Elizabeth of Austria) to appoint twenty female members of the Hungarian House of Magnates.

—The Queen of Holland recently made an attempt at suicide. Domestic troubles are said to have driven her to the rash act. Her life was saved, however, and steps were taken to hush up the whole matter.

—The Pope is said to entertain the intention of conferring on the Prince Imperial of France the title of Roman Patriarch, which was once destined for the Emperor himself, and which was last borne by Charlemagne.

—A proof of the remarkable decline of Alexander Dumas' popularity as a romancer, is mentioned in that of his publishers, who have offered to give him more than a few thousand francs for it.

—For the last two years the English military system has undergone a severe ordeal from the criticisms of the press, and the public mind is being prepared for the discontinuance of the sale of commissions. A more thorough knowledge of the elements of drill and discipline is also perceptibly improved.

—Mr. Vernon Harcourt, "Historical," of the London Times, is said to be extremely unattractive in person and manners. One of the London papers tells the story as current among the clubs, that six gentlemen mutually agreed to dine together, each asking the most unpromising of his acquaintances to join the party.

—Some rather curious statistics have been collected in reference to the composition of the British House of Commons. It is said to contain 388 University graduates, among whom are 151 of Oxford and 237 of Cambridge. There are 287 members who were educated at public schools, 131 at Eton, 68 at Harrow, 39 at Rugby, and the remainder in smaller numbers.

—Of the nobility there are 8 Irish peers and 106 sons of peers. The baronets number 120, the members of the army 98, those in the navy 13. Commons are represented by 15 bankers and 136 engaged in other kinds of business. There are 10 fathers who have sons sitting with them in the House, 24 pairs of brothers, and 3 brothers of one family.

—Four men and two women have just been tried before the Tribunal of Correctional Police of Paris, on a charge of introducing the lantern into France. Nearly seven hundred copies of that publication were found at the residence of two of the accused; there were also found a petition with eight large pockets, by the aid of which one of the females had recently brought from Brussels one hundred and thirty numbers of the prohibited work, and a small, velvet and belt; containing in all twenty-three copies of the same.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

THE CLOSE OF CONGRESS.

EXCITING SCENES AMONG THE MODEL LEGISLATORS.

Flourish Taken Between Butler, Logan and Schenck.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Herald, describing the last hours of the Forty-first Congress on Saturday morning, says: "The closing scenes in the House were both exciting and ludicrous. After midnight, when the galleries began to thin out, members threw aside the propriety of reserve, and the presence of persons in the galleries seems to impose. Their conduct was, if possible, less dignified, and their general bearing and demeanor seemed to relax. We saw one member, and we will do just as we please. By one o'clock, everybody had left except a few negroes to the extent of their means, but when he wished her to go a step further and assist herself guilty of a crime she did not commit, she left him."

FOREIGN SUMMARY.

—The ladies of Hungary have asked Parliament to authorize the Queen of Hungary (the Empress Elizabeth of Austria) to appoint twenty female members of the Hungarian House of Magnates.

—The Queen of Holland recently made an attempt at suicide. Domestic troubles are said to have driven her to the rash act. Her life was saved, however, and steps were taken to hush up the whole matter.

—The Pope is said to entertain the intention of conferring on the Prince Imperial of France the title of Roman Patriarch, which was once destined for the Emperor himself, and which was last borne by Charlemagne.

—A proof of the remarkable decline of Alexander Dumas' popularity as a romancer, is mentioned in that of his publishers, who have offered to give him more than a few thousand francs for it.

—For the last two years the English military system has undergone a severe ordeal from the criticisms of the press, and the public mind is being prepared for the discontinuance of the sale of commissions. A more thorough knowledge of the elements of drill and discipline is also perceptibly improved.

—Mr. Vernon Harcourt, "Historical," of the London Times, is said to be extremely unattractive in person and manners. One of the London papers tells the story as current among the clubs, that six gentlemen mutually agreed to dine together, each asking the most unpromising of his acquaintances to join the party.

—Some rather curious statistics have been collected in reference to the composition of the British House of Commons. It is said to contain 388 University graduates, among whom are 151 of Oxford and 237 of Cambridge. There are 287 members who were educated at public schools, 131 at Eton, 68 at Harrow, 39 at Rugby, and the remainder in smaller numbers.

—Of the nobility there are 8 Irish peers and 106 sons of peers. The baronets number 120, the members of the army 98, those in the navy 13. Commons are represented by 15 bankers and 136 engaged in other kinds of business. There are 10 fathers who have sons sitting with them in the House, 24 pairs of brothers, and 3 brothers of one family.

—Four men and two women have just been tried before the Tribunal of Correctional Police of Paris, on a charge of introducing the lantern into France. Nearly seven hundred copies of that publication were found at the residence of two of the accused; there were also found a petition with eight large pockets, by the aid of which one of the females had recently brought from Brussels one hundred and thirty numbers of the prohibited work, and a small, velvet and belt; containing in all twenty-three copies of the same.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.

—The Transatlantic conference of the North German Confederation force upon lookers-on the impression, which is also universally prevalent in Germany, that the present state of things is merely provisional, and that it is destined to such.

—At the present moment, with all its intents and purposes, the twenty-four millions who make up the mighty kingdom of Prussia are living a double political life, and are ruled by a double government. On the one side there is the Prussian Parliament, the Prussian Ministry and the Prussian bureaucracy; on the other side there is the National Parliament, the Federal Chancellor, and the Federal Council.